WE would put it to the citizens of Cork—are they satisfied with the protection to properly and life statisfied with the protection to properly and life send to be created as the confidence in the Constablary and in the Watchmen 's a to render them indifferent to any further protection at night? If they are satisfied with things as they are, them, of course, no more need be things as they are, them, of course, no more need by the confidence of the confidence of the confidence of the watchmen of the watchmen of the We searcely think they can. For what is the fact? Whithin the last fertisging to three weeks, several and-cious burglaries have been perpetured in the city into in remote and lonely and thinly populated into city and in the contrained crowded thoroughfares. On Friday, the Recommen sentences one of the burglars to 10 years, which is the contrained crowded thoroughfares. On Friday, the Recommen sentences one of the burglars to 10 years, which have for some time past been of rare occurrence, have, or in the winter months. If, then, these outrages are attributed, and with every show a ready of the contrained contrained contrained contrained contrained contrained contrained con of the break of the control of the break of the action of the segment the class of those must be taken. Being to this class ready for any oleone. If they be not resisted, it your boxes, and carry off, as injust force, what they please, a by do so further player. But they must whether they attempt at murd-from such a quarter would be treated by the indignant watchman, we awell imagine. Indeed a wholsome lesson, in the way of a neat burgiary, is rather useful than otherwise to a watchman, for it makes people begin to understand the value of a watchman, and the windom of paying him, whatever be its ago, his tastes, his habits, or his opinions on things in general, and the duties of a notorrand guardian in particular. Be-garding this self-constituted class even in the most forcurshic light, is thew, in their number, in their vigitates, and in their efficiency, a sufficient protection for the self-constituted class even in the most forcurshic light, is thew, in their ample, in their vigitates, and in their efficiency, a sufficient protection for the self-constituted class even in the most forcurshic particular of the self-constituted and their particular of the self-constituted and their constitute and who next live?
